

The first InDesign assignment was a great introduction to the program. I found the objective to be fairly straightforward, which helped me ease into the software. The most challenging part for me was creating a logo in Photoshop. I had to do some research to figure out how to design one, and I ended up choosing a simple design that I think worked well. I really enjoyed working on the project overall.

